

OPA36. The Wolf and the Donkey

Script

A Donkey was eating happily near the woods when he saw a Wolf. The Wolf was trying to get closer so the Donkey soon realized what the Wolf was thinking about. So, he thought of a plan to save himself. He started to walk like if he were hurt.

When the Wolf finally came up to him, he asked the Donkey why he was walking with difficulty. The Donkey replied that he had a sharp thorn in his back leg. "Please Mr. Wolf, take it out!" He asked. "If not, the thorn could stick in your throat when you eat me." The Wolf thought it was a good suggestion and asked the Donkey to lift up his foot. He began to search carefully. While he was looking at his foot, the Donkey asked him to look closer.

Just then, the Donkey kicked out as hard as he could sending the Wolf some feet away. And while the Wolf was getting very slowly and painfully to his feet, the Donkey ran as far as he could to be safe.

"Serves me right," thought the Wolf as he was trying to get on his feet. "I'm a butcher by trade, not a doctor!"

Moral: Stick to your trade!
